

A photograph of a woman's hands gently holding her breast, with a soft red glow highlighting the area of concern. The woman is wearing a white tank top.

New Breast Pain Clinic

Breast pain is very common.
There are lots of reasons why women might have breast pain.

Periods, pregnancy and breast feeding are all common reasons.

On its own, it is not a sign of breast cancer. Most women will experience breast pain at some stage in their life.

There are no mammograms or scans in the breast pain clinic. Instead, it focuses on finding the causes of the pain and identifying ways of helping women to manage it.

If you are experiencing breast pain, please speak to your GP.